IN-DESIGN INTERIORS

Angela Hagerty, the owner of InDesign Interiors, has over 20 years of experience in the design industry. She has taken on everything from residential decorating projects to corporate space planning jobs and has always operated with a hands-on management approach and a commitment to superb customer service.

“I take pride in asking the right questions and using a collaborative approach with my clients for final design,” says Hagerty. “I am there during the planning process through turn-key completion.”

Hagerty established InDesign Interiors in the year 2000 after some of her clients encouraged her to branch out on her own. With a background in Computer Aided Design drafting, Angela has a talent for creating functional spaces that are also aesthetically pleasing. She studied interior design and architecture at Endicott College and continued her education at Wentworth Institute of Technology.

Prior to opening her own business, Hagerty worked for the architectural and engineering firm TRO Jung Brannen, which had an extensive portfolio of projects throughout the United States, the Middle East and Asia. Hagerty worked on space-planning projects for clients like the Museum of Science in Boston, Dunkin’ Donuts Corporation as well as government jobs at Hanscom Air Force Base and Logan International Airport.

InDesign Interiors offers a wide range of design and decorating services, ranging from space planning and kitchen and bath design, to paint, tile and granite selection and personal shopping. Working closely with architects, Hagerty ensures that her work fits the desires of her clients. “Interior design solutions are the essence of who I am,” she says. “I am a space-planning problem solver.” Whether it’s a modest home or a lavish estate, InDesign Interiors will create the environment you desire. “No project is too big or too small,” says Hagerty. “I will tackle anything from paint to planning.”
